CANADIANS ARE INVITED TO MAKE POPPIES BLOOM FROM SEA TO SEA AS NATION PAYS TRIBUTE TO ALL WHO SERVED IN FIRST WORLD WAR

A red crayon and a printed image of a poppy.

These will be the only tools needed by Canadians who want to take part in a national project to honour the approximately 640,000 Canadians and Newfoundlanders who served in the First World War. On "Vimy Ridge Day," April 9, 2010, the Government of Canada will recognize those who served in "The Great War" at a ceremony at the National War Memorial in Ottawa. Canada's last known veteran of the war, John "Jack" Babcock, died in February.

Each One Remembered/On se souvient de chacun is a project designed to enable everyone to print and colour a poppy picture and place it in a window for the morning of April 9th. "It would be a wonderful show of national respect and honour if we could have 640,000 images in the windows of schools and workplaces across Canada--- one for each participant in the war," says Linda Granfield of Toronto, the creator of the project. "This is a no-cost way for all Canadians to take part in the "Vimy Ridge Day" proceedings. Imagine if we could walk or drive down the street and see red poppies in the windows of every school, or at the residences of the Governor General and the Prime Minister?"

"The Canadians and Newfoundlanders spent four long years on the world's battlefields," says Granfield. "We have four short weeks to put 640,000 coloured images of the poppy in windows across Canada. Can we do it? I'm sure we can. My motto is "Every Day is Remembrance Day" and here's a way to honour those who never returned and those who did return and contributed in so many ways to the life we have today."
