ABOUT THE BOOK

Lala wakes up one morning and decides that she owns the world. Quick as a fox, she bounds to her box of treasures and finds her shiny red dots — to mark what is hers, because there's nothing that's not!

Lala's bear gets a dot, as do her blankie, boots and even the markers she uses to make scrawls on her walls. But when she finishes labeling everything in her room and goes to label her dad-daddy's socks, Lala realizes that she's out of dots! Soon Lala discovers that she can simply create her own red dots. Will anything be safe from Lala?

Join rambunctious Lala on her quest to own the world in this joyful picture book that celebrates confidence and positive thinking.

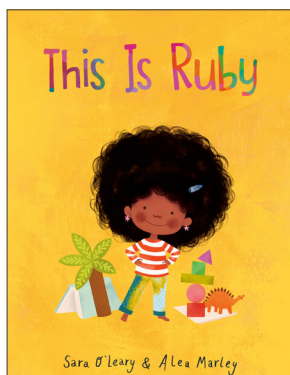

KEEP THE CONVERSATION GOING

Here are some ideas, activities and questions to consider after you've read the book.

- Lala has a “My Lala box” filled with a shimmering shimmer of treasures galore. There are My Lala ribbons, bows, feathers and candy. Create your own box. What will you fill it with?
- Lala uses red dots to mark what is hers. Instead of marking what's yours with dots, try first estimating how many items are yours and then count them. How close or far off was your guess?
